Sri Sri Academy recently launched its first virtual magazine, Sri Kiran, at the school's annual management meeting. The magazine for the session 2020-21 was collated by founding principal Suvina Shunglu, two teachers and a staff member.

Although the school was closed in view of the pandemic, there were digital classrooms, events and inter-house competitions, so that learning is not hampered. Consequently, theme-based digital newsletters were needed to keep every section of the school informed about all that had happened in the institute during the pandemic year. Digital newsletters were prepared every alternate month by various departments to calibrate the school's tumultuous journey. While collating the material for the past three months of the academic year, the contributions ran into hundreds of pages, which came out in the form of a digital magazine.

education, wiping out geographical boundaries, is the theme of the virtual magazine. "The entire process of bringing out a virtual magazine was exhilarating. We did not expect such a response from students. However, we are glad to see the amount of creative work that happened during the lockdown," said Shunglu.
